Regimental Gunner: TTP of the Week

FIRE AND MOVEMENT: SAMK PART 1

- Suppress: Covering fires must be established in order to allow the Marines buddy the ability to move into the second step. Use the assault fire concept, while keeping in mind the sustained rate of fire of 12 to 15 rounds. The Marine must maintain communication by any means possible to allow his buddy to move. This can be done by yelling, “SET.”
- Assess: Prior to movement a Marine must assess the suppression being put on his team and enemy. He must assess the lay of the ground by assessing micro-terrain, positions of cover and concealment, as well geometry of fires both for friendly and enemy. He must also take into consideration the condition of his weapon system and ammunition. If required, he should reload or conduct corrective action prior to exposing himself to further risk. Your shooting position should not match where you took cover. The team leader will take the initiative and become the forward man for his buddy. He must take into consideration a communication/orders being provided whether explicit or implicit. The Marine is ready to execute the next step when he has observed, orientated to the situation and decided on a route to his next fighting position. The Marine must maintain communication by any means possible to allow his buddy to move. This can be done yelling, “MOVING.” If possible, the buddy will reply, “MOVE.” When starting from the prone position, raise the head slowly and steadily and select a new position. Lower the head slowly, draw arms inward, cock right leg forward, and prepare to rush.

FIRE AND MOVEMENT: SAMK PART 2

- Move: When it is time to move, first ensure that your weapon is in condition 1, so that you will be able to suppress when you get to your next fighting position, and on safe so you don't have a negligent discharge. (1) Get Up. Pull your hands in close to your chest, tuck the buttstock under your armpit, and elevate your muzzle to ensure that it doesn't go into the dirt. Pull your strong side leg up and push up with your non firing hand. (2) Sprint. As fast as you can go. You have approximately 3 seconds to get to the fighting position that you identified and get down before an enemy will likely be able to take a well-aimed shot at you. We measure this time by saying, "I'm up, he sees me, I'm down." (3) Get Down. Quickly drop to both knees, pulling the buttstock back under your armpit and elevating the muzzle, and catching yourself with your non-firing hand. Get down, shoulder the weapon, and immediately start suppressing again. (4) High Crawl/Low Crawl. If you need to move a short distance to a better position while you are being suppressed or attempting to avoid observation, use the high or low crawl depending on the available cover and concealment. The Marine must maintain communication by any means possible to allow his buddy to move. This can be done yelling, "SET."
- Kill: Your decision-making process must continue cycling during the conduct of fire and movement. While providing suppression, he must continue to observe the direct front for enemy, terrain, orders or leader's intent. His assessment will lead to him to be orient and decide on his next movement and opportunity to kill the enemy. Any disruption of the OODA process leads to loss of momentum, resulting in friction during the attack.

TikTok, developed by The Chinese company ByteDance, founded by Zhang Yiming, is one of multiple avenues the Chinese government can use to manage public narratives and disseminate propaganda. Chinese law states that the government can access any and all information that flows through Chinese servers, hence any and all data on TikTok, without giving notice to service providers, companies, or end users. Your facial recognition, location data and routines, and A.I. based image scanning techniques, etc. are what the Chinese government can obtain, your sensitive information, all through the use of TikTok.

This means the Chinese government can access any and all data collected from its user's smartphones without the need for a warrant or any form of notification. The Chinese government can manage narratives and engage with American audiences by pushing pro-Chinese narratives, and is a target of foreign influence campaigns. Endstate: DELETE TikTok!
